Chaos Control Girls

very very first design

Introductions

In a world of chaos, most of the boys have watched too many memes, causing them to go crazy and become what we call “Crisis.” Only the girls and a few introverted boys are left. So they decide to form a team to take down all the Crisis.

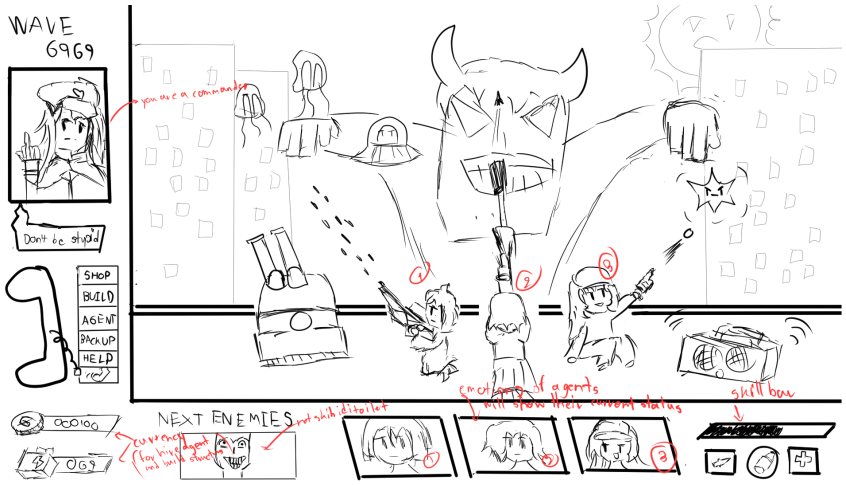
"Chaos Control Girls" is a real-time strategy tower defense game with some roguelike elements. You are the commander of the army. Your goal is to overcome all the Crisis. Build an unbeatable army of girls by leading your team, managing your time in battles, and harnessing the power of each agent’s friendship.

Highlights

Most tower defense games feel repetitive. Monsters come in a single line, and you just place objects or characters to defend the tower at the end of that line. In this game, enemies can appear from anywhere and strike so suddenly that you won’t have time to react. You’ll need to think quickly about how to fight the enemies, which skills to use, what team composition to choose, and whether there’s any time left to prepare. You’ll constantly experience intense and exciting moments while defending our tower, making it an enjoyable challenge.

In this game, the keyboard is the only controller you need, and you'll use the entire keyboard to make it feel like you're truly in control of the tower’s panel.

Gameplay Layout Design



Early Layout Design

Gameplay & Core Mechanics

Main Objective

Your main objective is to survive as many waves as possible. In this game, you will face an unlimited number of waves of enemies that become progressively harder as the in-game days pass. You can also compete against your friends to see who can survive the most waves.

The Commander

As a commander, your duty is to give commands to your army. Use these commands to issue orders to your team. You can unlock new commands by purchasing them from the shop or by leveling up your base.

When you acquire new commands, you can assign them to specific keyboard keys for instant use.

There are four types of commands: Strike (for attacking), Shield (for guarding or countering), Support (for buffing agents), and Starburst (the ultimate skill). Each type has its own combo, but there are limited command slots available for each type.

Commanders have ranks, similar to leveling up in other games. When you rank up, you earn rewards such as new commands, new agents, and new perks. You can also unlock additional command slots. To rank up, you need to survive day by day in the game or defeat the boss for experience bonuses.

Agents

Agents are characters who support you by preventing enemies from getting close to your tower. Each agent has unique attacks, skills, ultimates, and special interactions with other agents.

Mostly the attacking of agents has a determined direction.

There’s no limit to how many agents you can place, but each agent occupies a different area on the battlefield, so you'll need to manage their positions carefully.

Some characters have relationships with others—some positive, some negative. You can’t place an agent too close to another if they have animosity toward each other. However, if they have a positive relationship, they will gain special interaction skills and buffs.

Time Management

Time in this game flows continuously, with 24 in-game hours, where each hour lasts 20 seconds. The day is divided into three phases: Sunrise, Sunset, and Midnight. The number and strength of enemies vary depending on the time of day.

Stores have specific opening and closing times, making time management even more crucial. Additionally, there is a limited stock of items, so they can sell out, but they will be restocked at predetermined times.

Additionally, constructing structures on the tower requires time to develop the most effective army.

Path Choosing

How can you perish all of the Crisis if you stay at the same place. The tower will always move to clear madness around the world. You can choose your way to prevent unpredictable situations or go straight even if you are not ready. And maybe you can get benefits or have a little bit of time to relax.